Born and began his career in Liverpool from where he moved to Manchester as part of the opening team of the Piccadilly Hotel, the first new five star hotel outside of London. He continued his career in Malta and then Paris, working with the young Joel Robuchon before taking up his first position as Executive Chef in Iran where he stayed until the revolution. He worked as Executive Chef in Malta and Qatar before moving to Dubai where he became Corporate Chef of the Jebel Ali Group of Hotels. While in Dubai Mike was one of the founders and the first President of the Emirates Culinary Guild. He left Dubai for Gascony in South West France in 1999 to open his own hotel and restaurant using local products in his own style. He is now retired and keeps himself involved in the culinary world by way of gastronomic events and culinary competitions
